

BC Political Studies Association
2012 Conference – Biographical Notes of Participants
Updated April 27, 2012

OLABANJA AKINOLA is a current PhD student and recent MA graduate of the Political Science Department at the University of Guelph. Originally from Nigeria, Akinola has studied at the University of Ibadan where he obtained a B.Sc. Honours and received a MA from the Graduate Institute in Geneva, Switzerland. His research interest focuses on African politics and development. Email: oakinola@uoguelph.ca

BARBARA ARNEIL (Ph.D, University College London) is interested in the areas of identity politics and the history of political thought. She has published three books: "John Locke and America: The Defense of English Colonialism" (1996); "Feminism and Politics" (1999), and "Diverse Communities: The Problem with Social Capital" (2006, shortlisted for the 2008 C.B. MacPherson Prize). Her articles have appeared in many scholarly journals, including Political Theory, Journal of the History of Political Thought, Journal of the History of Ideas, and Perspectives on Politics. Her most recent research is in the areas of disability, cosmopolitanism, and internal colonization. Email: arneil@mail.ubc.ca

LISA BURKE – Bio not available. Email: lisamarburke@gmail.com

SABER AHMED CHOWDHURY is Assistant Professor at the Department of Peace and Conflict Studies, University of Dhaka. He is currently pursuing a Ph.D. in human rights at Monash University. He obtained bachelor's and master's degrees in Public Administration from the University of Dhaka, and an M.Phil in Public Administration Degree from the University of Bergen in 2004. He works with the Regional Public Administration Training Centre (RPATC), Rajshahi, as a guest speaker, and with JANIPOP (Jatiya Nirbachon Parjabekhon Parishad), an NGO, as Divisional Coordinator of Rajshahi. He has published a book and various articles in national and international journals. Email: saber.chowdhury@monash.edu

GABRIELE CIAMPINI studied Political Philosophy at the University of Pisa. His dissertation project was titled "The Elitism of Bertrand de Jouvenel". He received an Erasmus scholarship to study at the Université Libre de Bruxelles, graduating in September 2011. In the same year he received his Ph.D. in Political Science from the University of Florence. His research interests focus on the figure of Bertrand de Jouvenel and the relationship between philosophy and political science. Email: gabriele.ciampini@virgilio.it

MARK CRAWFORD is a graduate of the University of British Columbia, where he received an Honours B.A. in Political Science, and Oxford University, where he received a D.Phil in Politics. He also worked for a half-decade in the public sector, as a Parliamentary Intern, a DFAIT trade policy analyst, and an assistant to the Minister of Forests. These brief stints still inspire his research in the areas of Canadian and BC politics, public policy and public administration. His other interests include constitutional theory and international trade. He currently resides in

Edmonton, Alberta, where he is an Assistant Professor of Political Science at Athabasca University. markc@athabascau.ca

FRED CUTLER (Ph.D. Michigan) is Associate Professor and Director of Undergraduate Studies in the department of Political Science at the University of British Columbia. His research focuses on public opinion, elections, federalism, and political psychology. His scholarly articles have appeared in the Journal of Politics, the British Journal of Political Science, the Canadian Journal of Political Science, and Electoral Studies, among other publications, and he has also published chapters in various edited volumes. A new research project uses lab experiments to understand the effects of different numbers of political parties on voters. He is also co-investigator on the current Canadian Election Study. Email: cutler@exchange.ubc.ca

WOLFGANG DEPNER is a Ph.D candidate at the University of British Columbia Okanagan, where he specializes in Canadian and comparative politics under the supervision of Dr. Barrie McCullough. Other research interests include multiculturalism and the state of services for immigrants to Canada. Since 2010, he has held several sessional appointments at UBCO, teaching Political Science 101: Government of Canada and Political Science 303: Federalism in Canada. He has made various appearances in local media as a commentator on topical political issues, and is involved in the local ultimate frisbee community. Email: depner72@shaw.ca

DAVID DING received his Ph.D. from the University of Calgary in 1999. He was a faculty member of the Department of Political Science of the Okanagan University College from 2000 to 2004, and has been an Associate Professor of Political Science at UBC Okanagan since 2005. His main research focus is China's political development and international relations in East Asia. His most recent publication is "Cross-Strait Peace Agreement: Diminishing Likelihood" in Asian Affairs: an American Review (March 2012). Email: david.ding@ubc.ca

LINDA ELMOSE earned her doctorate in 2010 and is currently teaching at Simon Fraser University in Burnaby, BC. Her current research interests revolve around understanding the transforming "new world order" of global governance, and locating Canada's "place" and degree of influence within this world in flux. Email: lelmoose@sfu.ca

ROBERT FARKASCH is Associate Professor at American Military University in West Virginia. He received his doctorate in Political Science from York University, Canada, in 2001. His current research interests are International Political Economics and Theories of Terrorism. Email: rfarkasch@gmail.com

KEVIN GINNELL holds a Master's degree from Simon Fraser University and is currently completing his doctoral thesis concerning urban regimes in a comparative context. His current research interests include metropolitan government, comparative urban politics/government, and Canadian/B.C. government. His teaching focus has been on Canadian politics/government, the administration of justice, and Canadian urban government. His post-doctoral plans include further research at the urban level of government/politics and continued instructional opportunities. Email: kginnell@sfu.ca

DOUG HAGAR will begin his Ph.D. in political science at Carleton University in the fall. He has been employed as a researcher at the Niagara Community Observatory at Brock University since 2009, and has been involved as a research assistant in the Welcoming Communities Initiative-Local Immigration Partnership (WCI-LIP). His research interests include social media, political and civic participation, local government, and local immigrant integration. Email: dhagar@brocku.ca

MILAD EL-HARATHI is Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science at Benghazi University, Benghazi, Libya. He holds a Ph.D. from the Institute of International Relations, Warsaw University. Email: miladelharathi@rocketmail.com

ANDREW HEARD is Associate Professor in the department of Political Science at Simon Fraser University. He holds a Ph.D from the University of Toronto. His current research interests centre on Canadian judicial and constitutional issues, as well as theoretical problems in comparative human rights. Email: aheard@sfu.ca

CHARLES HORN is currently a SSHRC Graduate Scholar with the Department of Political Science at the University of Victoria, and a Principal Investigator with an Aboriginal research organization. His research interests focus on governance and economic development in Aboriginal communities, urban Aboriginal politics, British Columbia and Canadian political institutions, and the rhetorical dimensions of professional writing. He has participated in numerous national and regional research initiatives, including several community-based research projects, and has worked as a negotiator for Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal governments over a twenty year period. charleshorn@shaw.ca

MICHAEL HOWLETT is Professor and Burnaby Mountain Chair of the Department of Political Science at Simon Fraser University. He specializes in public policy analysis, political economy, and resource and environmental policy. He taught at Queen's University (1986–88) and the University of Victoria (1988–89) before coming to SFU, and was Visiting Professor at the Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy of the National University of Singapore (2009–10). He is the author of various books including "The Political Economy of Canada" (1992 and 1999), "Studying Public Policy" (1995, 2003 and 2009), and "Designing Public Policy" (2010). He has published numerous articles and book chapters on public policy analysis, political economy, Canadian politics, and resource and environmental policy. Email: howlett@sfu.ca

IVAN JANKOVIC was born and raised in Serbia, where he graduated with a degree in Philosophy in 2002. After moving to Canada in 2009, he completed an M.A. in Political Science at the University of Windsor in 2011, and was admitted to the Ph.D. program in Political Science at Simon Fraser University. He publishes extensively, in both Serbian and English, in the fields of political and constitutional theory as well as economic theory and policy. His current research focuses on the relationship between classical liberal ideas and local self-government in Canada and the USA. Email: ijankovi@sfu.ca

ADAM JONES is Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of British Columbia Okanagan. He is the author of "Genocide: A Comprehensive Introduction" (2006, 2010), and author or editor of fifteen other books on genocide and crimes against humanity, gender and international relations, and mass media and democratization. He was selected as one of "Fifty Key Thinkers on the Holocaust and Genocide" for the book project of that title (2010), and has recently worked as an expert consultant with the United Nations Office of the Special Adviser for the Prevention of Genocide (OSAPG). Email: adam.jones@ubc.ca

SERENA KATAOKA is a Ph.D. candidate in the Department of Political Science at the University of Victoria. Threading through her academic research, community-based work, and artistic interventions is a commitment to challenging the assumption that our ways of living together are settled. Her dissertation shows the ways in which civil city myths inform the places we inhabit, through a case study of the Bridgeview neighbourhood. Email: serenakataoka@gmail.com

ROYCE KOOP is assistant professor in the School of Public Policy at Simon Fraser University. His research focuses on representation, federalism, intergovernmental relations, and municipal politics. Email: royce.koop@me.com

DEBORAH KRAUS recently completed her Master's degree at Simon Fraser University in the School of Public Policy. Her main areas of research interest include social policy, intergovernmental relations, and asset-building strategies for families in social housing. Prior to being admitted to the program, Deborah provided policy and research services to all levels of government on housing and homelessness. Much of this work focused on the Housing First approach for individuals with multiple health issues, and developing homeless action plans for the City of Vancouver, Metro Vancouver, and Streethome Foundation. Email: dkraus@sfu.ca

VAUGHAN LYON is a Ph.D. graduate of UBC in political science. His 25-year teaching career was at Trent University, where he taught courses in Canadian and American politics. His research focus has been on the reconstruction of Canadian political institutions to create a collaborative relationship between citizens and their governments. His most recent book, "Power Shift: From Party Elites to Informed Citizens" (2012), supports the desire of citizens for constituency representation. Email: vaughanlyon@shaw.ca

BRENDA LYSHAUG's current research focuses on ethical issues related to war and political violence. She is also interested in conceptions of 'evil', and in the use of this category to evaluate and respond to extreme forms of political violence and atrocity. She has taught at the University of Utah and at Simon Fraser University, and has published articles in Contemporary Political Theory and Gender & Politics. She received her Ph.D. in Politics from Princeton University. Email: blyshaug@sfu.ca

ANDREA MIGONE is a Lecturer in the Department of Political Science at Simon Fraser University. His research specializations are in public administration and comparative political economy. He has served as a postdoctoral fellow and worked on a number of projects in biotechnology funded by GenomeBC and GenomeCanada. His work on regulation and participation in biotechnology has appeared in journals including Science and Public Policy, Technology in Society, and Policy and Society. Email: amigone@sfu.ca

JAISHREE MISHRA – Bio not available. Email: Jaishreemishra7@rediffmail.com

ANJA NOVAK is a graduate student in the Department of Political Science at Simon Fraser University (SFU), working on her Graduate Certificate in Development and Sustainability. She earned her undergraduate degree in International Relations at the University of Ljubljana, Slovenia. Her knowledge of Slovenian development cooperation was gained through an internship with the Slovenian development NGO, Platform for Development Cooperation and Humanitarian Aid. Her research interest lies in economic development and poverty alleviation in Sub-Saharan Africa. Email: anjan@sfu.ca

PETER G. PRONTZOS has taught Political Science for over 20 years at Langara College in Vancouver. His courses have included International Political Economy, Latin American Studies, Peace and Conflict Studies, Development, Ideologies, Social Movements, International Relations, and Political Philosophy. He also has a degree in Psychology, and has an interest in anthropology, history, the natural sciences, philosophy, and the environment. He is the editor of the Newsletter of the Association for Prenatal and Perinatal Psychology and Health (APPPAH), and is currently writing his first book, "Remembering Your Humanity", on nothing less than the human condition. Email: pprontzo@langara.bc.ca

RUTH SITUMA – graduated with a MA from the Department of Political Science at Guelph. Kenyan born, she has focused her research on Inter-governmental Organizations in Africa, in particular, the African Union, and also focusing on elections and internal displacement in Kenya. She currently works at UBC. Email: rsituma@uoguelph.ca

AMANDA SLEVIN is a third-year Ph.D. candidate with the School of Sociology at University College Dublin, Ireland. Funded by the Irish Research Council for the Humanities and Social Sciences, her research examines the development of the Irish state's approach to the management of its gas and oil, and through a case study of the ongoing Corrib gas conflict, some of the social, economic, political and environmental consequences. Alongside 14 years of experience in adult education and community work, she holds a number of related academic qualifications, including an M.A. and H.Dip in Adult and Community Education and a B.A. Hons in Community Development. Email: amanda.slevin@ucdconnect.ie

PATRICK SMITH completed his Ph.D. in Government at the London School of Economics. He is Director of the Institute of Governance Studies and Professor of Political Science and Urban Studies at Simon Fraser University. He has authored or edited a dozen books and related articles on such issues as local, urban, and metropolitan governance; anti-terrorism, security and human rights; political parties and elections; public policy; and multi-level governance. Email: psmith.sfu@gmail.com

PEYI SOYINKA-AIREWELE is Associate Professor of African and International Politics at Ithaca College in New York. She received her PhD in International Studies from the University of Birmingham, U.K. Her current research engages the socio-political discourses of popular African cinema and their fluid interpretations of transforming identities and issues in global and local spaces. Her publications include Socio-Political Scaffolding and the Construction of Change, co-edited with Kelechi Kalu (2008), Reframing Contemporary Africa, co-edited with Kiki Edozie (2009) and Invoking the Past, Conjuring the Nation (forthcoming). Email: pairewele@ithaca.edu

DELACEY TEDESCO is a Ph.D. candidate in Political Science at the University of Victoria. Her research draws on her experience of living in Kelowna to explore what our common understandings of urbanization tell us about our idealizations of politics. Against these common understandings, her research argues for a political analysis of urbanization as a complex of aporetic boundary practices that continually construct and undermine nature, the city, politics, and the relationships among them. She has presented this research in the UK, Berlin, Montreal, Portland, and San Diego. Email: delacey@shaw.ca

ROSALIND WARNER is an instructor of Political Science at Okanagan College. She has researched ecological modernization, global environmental governance issues, protected areas governance in North America, environmental discourses, and environment and trade in Canadian foreign policy. For more, visit: <http://okanagan.academia.edu/RosalindWarner> or <http://rozwarner.wordpress.com/>. Email: ROWarner@okanagan.bc.ca

MICHAEL WRIGHT is ABD from the University of Pittsburgh, Graduate School of Public and International Affairs, researching the motivations of EU member states regarding Turkey's candidacy for membership in the European Union. He is a graduate of Leiden University in the Netherlands (MA), and CU-Colorado Springs (BA). He has taught at the University of Texas at San Antonio and currently lives in Portland, Oregon. Aside from academic pursuits, he has been active in local politics in San Antonio, TX and Colorado Springs, CO. Email: MIW13@pitt.edu

JASON ZORBAS is a lecturer in the Department of Political Studies at St. Thomas More College, which is affiliated with the University of Saskatchewan. He is the author of "Diefenbaker and Latin America: the Pursuit of Autonomy" as well as other works exploring John Diefenbaker's foreign policies. His current research focuses on Diefenbaker's relationships with various aspects of the Hellenic world such as Greece, Cyprus, and the Greek diaspora in Canada. Email: jzorbas@stmcollege.ca